FSCS steps in to protect members of St Columba's credit union

The Financial Services Compensation Scheme (FSCS) is stepping in to protect members of St Columba's Credit Union who have lost money after the credit union closed its doors.

FSCS has today sent application forms to everyone so far known to be a member of the Bradford credit union, to enable them to claim compensation from the Scheme for lost savings. Around 1,400 people are listed as members according to the credit union's records.

"FSCS performs a vital role in protecting consumers and maintaining confidence in the financial services sector. Where consumers are facing financial hardship we will pull out all the stops to prioritise their claims. As a public body there are things we have to do before we can pay compensation but we are doing everything we can to ensure these consumers get compensation for their lost savings fast," says Loretta Minghella, FSCS Chief Executive.

Anyone who believes they are a member of the credit union but who does not receive an application form by Thursday 12th October should contact the Scheme on 020 7892 7300 if they think they have lost money.

FSCS was set up under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000. It provides a fund of last resort for consumers who have claims against regulated firms that are unable to pay them (described by FSCS as being "in default"). Before FSCS can pay claims for compensation it must be satisfied that the firm (in this case St Columba's credit union) is unable to pay back money it owes to its customers. Because of the potential financial hardship being faced by members of this credit union, FSCS is fast-tracking its default investigations and increasing resources so that it can deal with claims for compensation quickly.

There is a limit to the compensation FSCS can pay. For claims against credit unions the limit is £31,700 – being 100% of the first £2,000 and 90% of the remainder of the money lost, up to a maximum of £31,700.

Notes to Editors:

1. About FSCS

The Financial Services Compensation Scheme (FSCS) is the UK's statutory fund of last resort for customers of authorised financial services firms. This means that FSCS can pay compensation if a firm is unable, or likely to be unable, to pay claims against it. FSCS is an independent body, set up under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (FSMA). The service is free to consumers.

2. Authorised firms

Our rules are made by the Financial Services Authority (FSA), the independent watchdog set up by government under FSMA to regulate financial services in the UK and protect the rights of consumers. The rules tell us which types of claims are eligible for compensation, and limit how much compensation we are allowed to pay. Firms need permission from the FSA to carry out a regulated activity, which covers activities such as accepting deposits, insurance business and investment business.

Dealing with an authorised firm gives consumers access to the Financial Ombudsman Service (FOS) and FSCS. Consumers can check that the firm they are dealing with is authorised by contacting the FSA's Consumer Helpline on 0845 606 1234.

3. Declaring a credit union in default

Before FSCS can pay compensation it must be satisfied that a credit union is unable to meet claims. It describes this as being 'in default'. The Scheme will declare a credit union default if:

- it has received at least one claim; and
- it is satisfied that the credit union is unable (or likely to be unable) to pay claims against it.

Declaring a credit union in default allows consumers who believe they may have lost money as a result of depositing money with that credit union to apply to us for compensation. In the case of St Columba's credit union we are sending out applications before we officially declare the credit union in default, and streamlining the process to help members get compensation as quickly as possible.

4. What is a credit union?

A credit union is a financial co-operative which is owned and controlled by its members.

To claim compensation, members should complete an application form which we will send to them. They must provide proof of their deposit with the failed credit union, which we will then verify against its books and records. If they have kept clear, accurate, records of their deposits and transactions it will help to speed up payment of compensation. If possible we will issue a cheque for compensation, but we will consider other alternatives for claimants who do not have a bank or building society account.

Amounts owed to the failed credit union by a member (for example, loans and interest) are taken into account before any compensation is paid. We may also take steps to recover sums due from members where those sums exceed a member's savings.

5. Limits of compensation

As a fund of last resort, FSCS can only pay compensation for financial loss where a firm is unable to meet claims. For deposits, the compensation limit is £31,700 and applies to each depositor for the total of their deposits with an organisation, regardless of how many accounts they hold or whether they are a single or joint account holder. In the case of a joint account FSCS will assume that the money in that account is split equally between account holders, unless evidence shows otherwise.

This means that each account holder in a joint account would be eligible for compensation up to the maximum limit.
